

Tuesday, March 20, 2007

Ed Rosenthal wins vindictive prosecution argument.

Â Image from public domain.Â On March 6, 2007, I blogged about the criminal retrial of medical marijuana cultivator Ed Rosenthal. Â Congratulations, Ed, on your March 14, 2007, victory in dismissing the new counts against you, through using the vindictive prosecution defense. The trial court's opinion is here. Â Now the prosecution is left to decide whether to pursue the original counts against Mr. Rosenthal, which yielded only one day in jail the first time around. The one-day sentence will generally cap any new sentence if Mr. Rosenthal is convicted at his retrial. Jon Katz.

Posted by Jon Katz in Criminal Defense at 01:00